

My Map to Becoming a Behaviorist

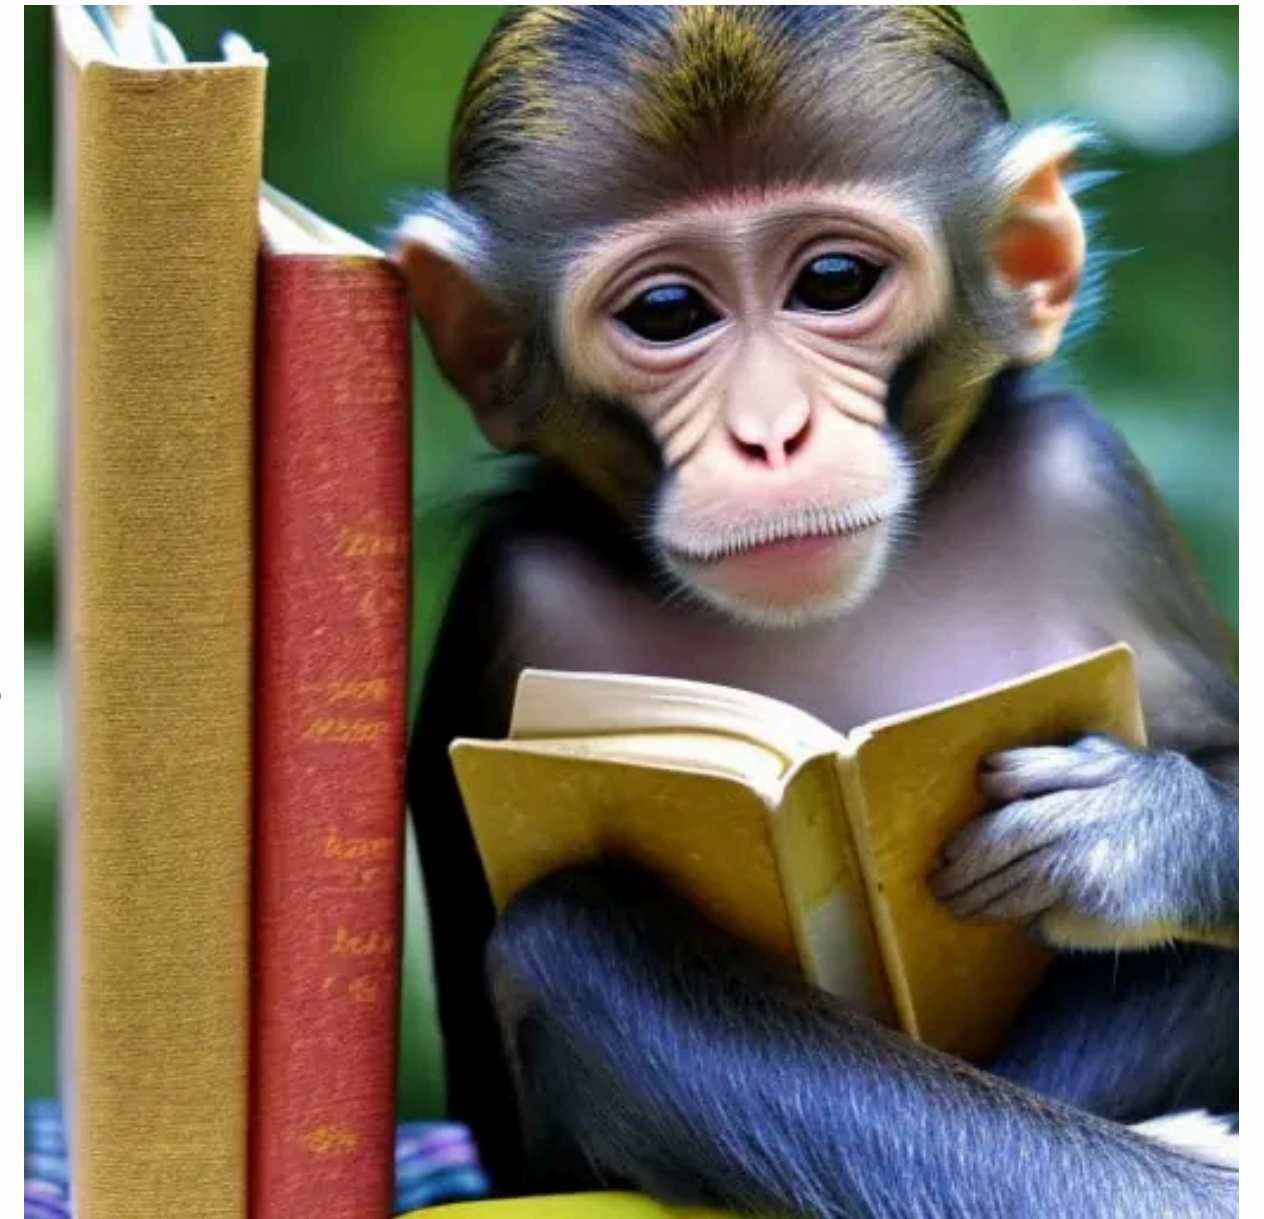

I have embarked on my journey as a Behavior Technician, which has become one of my greatest passions. Each day, I have the opportunity to work with Cynomolgus and Rhesus macaques. I eagerly anticipate learning more about behavior daily, as it helps me advance in my profession.

The beginning of my Journey

I believe I have a solid advantage in my journey to becoming a behaviorist, as I am currently working in the field. However, my goal is to deepen my knowledge by learning about the behaviors of all animals. I face numerous challenges, including working full-time, helping to raise my grandchildren, and managing a household. With dedication and hard work, I am confident I will achieve my goal.

By the conclusion of my journey, I aspire to earn a degree that will enable me to progress in my field of study. I aim to work at a higher level in my job, which will provide me with greater opportunities to support the animals I have come to cherish deeply.
